SERVICE OUTLINE

TCT's Educational Psychology (EP) service supports children and young people who are experiencing problems that hinder their successful learning and participation in school and other activities.

This includes a range of emotional, social issues or learning difficulties. Educational Psychologists support educational and early years settings, parents and children in all areas affecting learning and behaviour. Their role involves working with schools and parents, gathering information and identifying needs regarding a child's difficulties, and helping to put into place appropriate strategies to support a child's development in that area.

During consultations, suggestions may be made to contact another appropriate specialists such as Speech and Language therapists, physiotherapists and occupational therapists. Our EPs take this approach because involving other professionals can create a well-informed programme of strategies, and it ensures that the support offered is unified and not disjointed.

Who is it suitable for?

Our service supports children and young people who have difficulties which affect development. This may be related specifically to learning skills or in an area of emotional, social or behavioural development.

How do we offer this service?

Our EP service is available in either a full assessment or consultative format, involving both teachers and parents.

Ongoing assessment of children's learning difficulties is carried out in schools, with this information then used to discuss strategies.

After a review of progress with these strategies in place, a decision is made as to whether further assessment by an EP would be beneficial to gain a bigger picture of the child's strengths and weakness
